Please join us for a presentation on the history of women in agriculture. Since around 10,000 B.C., women have played an essential role in how food is sourced and harvested, according to the 2017 U.S. Census of Agriculture. Agriculture ranked in the top 3 most hazardous occupations. The number of women on the farm is continuing to increase. Your safety is essential, we will discuss how to stay safe out on the farm.

Clemson Extension is required by the USDA to offer program participants the opportunity to self-identify. By voluntarily providing us with your demographic information, we are able to more accurately document the impacts we are making to better the lives of the citizens of South Carolina.

Clemson University Cooperative Extension Service offers its programs to people of all ages, regardless of race, color, gender, religion, national origin, disability, political beliefs, sexual orientation, gender identity, marital or family status and is an equal opportunity employer.
