

Free Webinar: Three Questions Nonprofits Need to Ask When Fundraising

Nathan Krupa, Speaker

Nathan Krupa started as the grant writer for Golden Harvest Food Bank in 2011 with nothing but a copy of Grant Writing for Dummies, a bunch of dusty files, and a passion to feed the hungry. With those humble tools, he has gone on to raise more than $5,000,000 in the past 9 years, helping the food bank to buy buildings, trucks, forklifts, and run programs that feed hundreds of thousands of people. With success, Nathan developed a love for fundraising and the good that it makes possible. He began to seek out the best ideas that fundraisers around the globe are using to support their missions. While his professional focus has remained grant writing, he has also raised money through direct mail campaigns, online peer-to-peer fundraising, major gifts, planned giving, and phone fundraising. In 2017, Nathan started to share what he'd learned about fundraising on a new website, TheAlmoner.com. In the middle ages, an almoner was a person responsible for gathering food and money and giving it to the poor. The blog led to the publication of his first book on fundraising, Letters from the Almoner, which focuses on fundraising in a church setting. Still working at the food bank full time as a grant writer, Nathan loves to help other non-profits to discover the tools that they need to serve the needs they see in their communities. He delights in helping good people do good things in their communities.
